Shelton will at once begin the erection of a brick office on the present site. His intention is to make a combination law and newspaper office.

The question of granting license on the North side is being agitated considerably. There have been petitions both for and against it presented to the town board and in some instances those who signed the petition for saloons have sent in a request to have their names removed from the list, and protest against it. No action has been taken by the board and it is probable that none will be until public sentiment in that end of town has crystallized more thoroughly.

W. L. Beers was at Wausau and Milwaukee last week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Sievwright visited Milwaukee last week.

H. Lewis has a new commodious home nearly completed.

Geo. McKinstry is now located at 745 fourth street, Milwaukee.

Morris Doyle's reinstatement on the police force is highly satisfactory to the general public.

G. S. Coon and J. W. McCormick have received a couple of finely engraved cameos from Paul Brown, who is in Mississippi.

E. L. Leonard has moved his stock of goods from the building next to the Potter Drug Co. on Stevens street to the building occupied by John Schroeder on Brown street. He has a large line of new goods coming and will have better quarters than ever to display them in.

"Old Farmer Stebbings" and his company came back to Rhinelander pretty quick. At their first visit they had a house out of all proportion to their ability and it was the work of but a moment to cancel a date somewhere in order to return. Tuesday night they played to a fair sized audience, and gave about such satisfaction as they did before. They are not coming back again this season, at least they say so.

The two towns of Oneida county in town 35, were set off by the Legislature Monday, and attached to Forest county. Senator Pratt, who owns considerable hardwood land in these towns, wanted them put under the Forest county blanket, so that taxes would be reduced. Oneida has got it from quite a number of directions from the present legislature, but no one wants to think that the people are crying over it. There is a future and in that is the reward.

The ball given last week by the railroad boys for the benefit of Mrs. Greene, was a very successful affair, viewed from any point. Financially it was a bumper, something over two hundred dollars worth of tickets being sold. The Wausau music was good, and the decorations of the Opera House were fine. The boys trimmed up the gallery and center dome with bunting, flags, and colored lanterns until it presented the handsomest appearance that it ever had. The credit for the work is due to Messrs. Porter, Dunn, Redfield, Kearney, Jewell and others.

My wife was confined to her bed for over two months with a very severe attack of rheumatism. We could get nothing that would afford her any relief, and as a last resort gave Chamberlain's Pain Balm a trial. To our great surprise she began to improve after the first application, and by using it regularly she was soon able to get up and attend to her house work. E. H. Johnson, of C. J. Knutson & Co., Kensington, Minn. 50 cent bottles for sale by J. Y. Potter & Co. Drug Store.

A band of midnight assassins armed with a hand organ, murdered a number of national airs on the porch of prominent citizens Monday night. The intent of the parties was probably lawful and tuneful, but the music was both riotous and obscene. When the serenading party reached the room of a few of our most gifted young men in the block next to the first National Bank a shower-bath of calumny and slop-pearied with it a request to desist which was needed and heeded. Who the murderers were is impossible to find out, but certain it is that their hours are late and their music is bad, and that another case of hand organ serenade will cause more than a mere protest.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Brown and daughter were at Milwaukee a couple of days last week.

Mrs. G. W. Bishop returned from Milwaukee Saturday, considerably improved in health.

Miss Thania Peck has again taken cases in the New North office, after a few weeks vacation.

Thos. Loughlin, the prospective clerk of the new county of Vilas, was in town Monday between trains.

Mrs. McIndoe gave a very pleasant card and dancing party last week in honor of her nephew, Mr. Fleming, who was here from Idaho on a visit.

Parish Nichols is able to be about again. He was severely injured by being thrown from a carriage in Milwaukee last week. His left hip was dislocated and he was otherwise badly shaken up. He is fortunate to be about so soon.

George O'Connor was in town last week. He is a candidate for the office of Register in Vilas county but has recently found considerable opposition, as George's political affiliations in the past have been of the kind that the Governor most dislikes, it would seem as if George had a good chance to lose.

The Mill Men's Union can safely feel that they have the gratitude of every citizen of Rhinelander for the manner in which they supplied the city with something it needed badly—a first-class Opera House. The Grand is a credit to them and to the city. The decorations are neat and appropriate. They were done by Jewell. The furnishings and opera chairs are a great improvement over the old common style, and the scenery is new, elaborate and complete. The Union has done well and Manager Jeakinson who has charge of the bookings, promises to give Rhinelander some good attractions regularly.

"American Born" is a drama of power and interest. It tells a story of love and intrigue in a manner which holds the audience spell-bound. Mr. Sherman, who is putting on the drama here, is an actor of ability and experience who has made his character in American Born a study for years. In speaking to a New North reporter regarding the company that is to interpret the piece here, he said that in all his eighteen years experience as a thespian he had never seen a case of truer adaptation to lines than some of this company illustrate. Said he "the people of Rhinelander will be amazed at the talent that has lain smoldering up to this time." He is positive that so deceptive will be the "make-up" and that so completely does each one, like the true actor, lose their own identity in the character which they are portraying, that near friends and relatives will not be able to recognize them.

Robert Schilling, the Milwaukee labor agitator spoke in the Grand Opera House several times within the past week on the labor, tariff, financial and other questions. He is a man of brains and ability in the line of work he has chosen, and has succeeded in the past few years in making a good sized fortune out of his lectures and papers on such topics as those spoken of above. Mr. Schilling may be honest in his convictions, but his talk wouldn't indicate it. He appeals to prejudice to aid in carrying his audience into believing unfair and untruthful propositions, and, judging only by his speech he is not a safe man for men of any class or calling to follow. He is not as smart, as fair or as sane a man as W. W. O'Keefe, and will never be able, in our humble opinion, to obtain one-tenth part of the respect, or hold upon men that O'Keefe will. Mr. Schilling's reputation has always been that he was a fraud and it looks as though he had been sized up about right.

We will ship you a very fine nickel-plated 3-inch electric door bell, with push button, fifty feet of best insulated wire, Excelsior Battery that has to be recharged only once a year at a cost of 5 cents. Everything complete in box ready for shipment, with directions for putting in. Every house needs one of those bells. You can place bell in kitchen or any room in house. You push the button at front door, we do the rest. Price only $3.00. We also carry a full line of electric motors to run fans, sewing machines, etc., etc. Address, P. A. LEONARD & Co., Pioneer Block, Madison, Wis.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Dusel have gone below for a visit with friends.

Doing business without advertising is like kissing a pretty girl in the dark. You may know what you are doing, but no body else does.

P. J. O'Malley, of Minocqua, is said to be a candidate for treasurer of the new county of Vilas. P. B. Walsh, of Eagle, is the original candidate, but P. W. McIntyre says Walsh can't have it if he can prevent, A. McKenzie is also spoken of for the place.

Among the additions to Rhinelander which the coming summer is likely to see, is a large furniture factory. A big concern has its eye on Rhinelander and will locate here unless all signs fail.

G. W. Bishop and W. C. Ogden have purchased the building on Stevens street, owned by Chas. Naylor and occupied by Jackson & Fitzpatrick, plumbers. The consideration was $1,600.00.

Jackson & Fitzpatrick, the plumbers, have a big stock of goods in the line of steam, water and electrical fixtures, which indicates that they have some intentions of doing considerable business here.

The county of Oneida, as present constituted, has no cause to feel any alarm at the prospects of higher taxes. The territory taker has not only been a good tax giver for county purposes, but its appetite as a tax eater has always more than kept pace with its contributions. Public expenses will be curtailed in every particular and the county tax should be no higher than at present.

The setting off of Vilas County takes two county officers out of the territory of Oneida and consequently new ones are to be appointed. The superintendent of schools, N. A. Colman, will be the district attorney of the new county, and his successor named by the State Supt. Mrs. A. W. Shelton is a candidate for the office and seems likely to receive the appointment. Frank Rogers, the county surveyor, will soon resign and his successor be appointed by the county board.

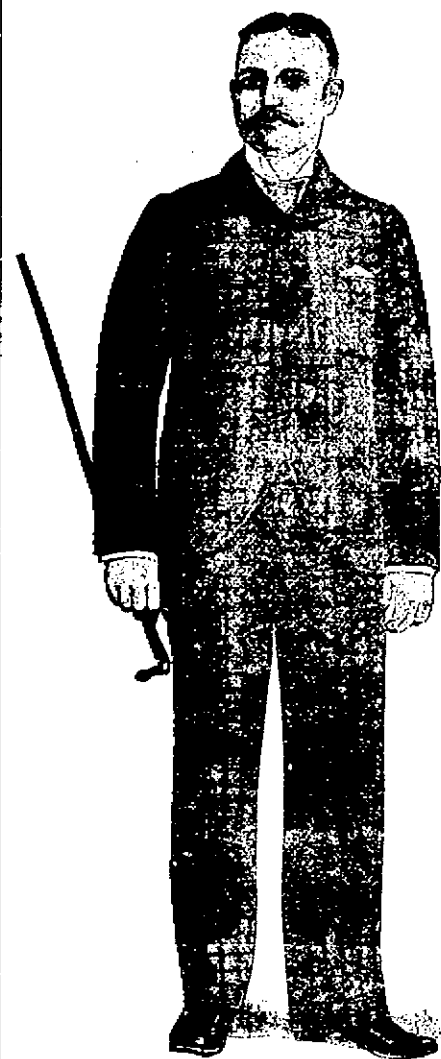

A bill recently introduced into the assembly is of interest to Wisconsin lumbermen. It provides that on or before the 1st of May each year every log owner shall deposit with the lumber inspector of his district a certified statement of the amount of logs banked by him during the preceding six months. The details of these reports are very specific and from these the inspector is to make up a record of the amount, location, etc., of all logs cut in his district. All the scale books used to record the scales of logs cut in the district are also to be turned over to the said inspector, whose duty it shall be to foot up totals and correct all errors contained therein. A penalty of $100 is provided for each refusal to furnish such report or scale book. The bill is designed to serve the double purpose of checking the illegal cutting of logs on public lands, and of assisting the assessors in finding the taxable logs in the districts where cut.

The sheriff of Waupaca county has returned from the Pacific coast with William Hansecomb, arrested at Ruby City, Wash., for complicity in the Mead murder. The authorities refuse to disclose whether he will be held as a defendant or merely as a witness. Hansecomb was a lumberman who operated in Waupaca county at the time of the murder and failed the next winter. It is alleged that he has startling evidence to give in the case. It is also rumored that within a few days the last of the suspected men will be arrested. The latest version of the story is that the Pinkertons have secured from some source a full confession and that the prosecution is now in possession of all the facts connected with the murder. One version of this story is that a New York lawyer who tried to negotiate the stolen bonds was cornered and had to give up the guilty persons to save himself. The trial takes place at Waupaca June 6.

To Property Owners. Every lot in Rhinelander must be cleaned of all offal, slops, ashes, and other debris deposited thereon during the winter and the work must be done at once. If property owners do not attend to it, the health board will, and charge it to the property. Signed, BOARD OF HEALTH, W. H. BROWN, Pres., I. TUTTLE, Supt.

READ ON YOUNG MAN

Because we have a full line of Builders' Hardware, and Building Paper, and can sell you nails for less money than anybody in Rhinelander. Why? Because we bought nails last winter when they were cheap. Now they cost more. We give the same old price. We are the only house (except one) in Rhinelander that buy in car lots. So buy where your money will reach the farthest.

LOOK OUT FOR PAINT.

Here we down them all. Heath and Miligan's paints at the same price you pay for common stuff. Don't take our word, but ask the painters. Covers more surface, looks brighter and wears longer than any paint in the world. But its no better than Pillsbury's Best Flour. What's the reason Reed & Son bake 2000 loaves of bread every week, and every body says what fine bread? Why they use Pillsbury's Best. We sell it.

SEIZED A THRONE.

Alexander I., of Serbia, declares Himself of Age, Deposits the Regency and Ministry and Proclaims Himself King.

BELGRADE, April 15.—A bloodless coup d'etat was effected here Thursday night, and King Alexander I., the youthful ruler of Serbia, who has heretofore governed the country through regents, now rules in his own name. A grand banquet was given at the palace on Thursday night to celebrate King Alexander's success in passing the examination prescribed for Serbian students, M. Ristic and Gen. Beli Markovitch, the regents, and all the ministers of state were present, as were also a large number of the friends and supporters of the regents.

How He Did It.

For many months past the situation in Serbia has been critical, owing to the abuse of their power by the regents and state officials. Affairs had become so bad that the king determined to take the reins in his own hands. In accordance with this determination plans were secretly laid by means of which the regents and ministry would be ousted without opportunity for opposition. Unsuspectingly the regents and ministers attended the banquet, and while they were enjoying themselves at the palace detachments of soldiers and bodies of police took possession of the ministers' houses and occupied the government buildings.

At midnight, while the festivities were still in progress, King Alexander proclaimed that he had attained his majority and that he had assumed, with the sloughs, the government of the country. As a matter of fact the king had not attained his majority. According to the Serbian law he does not become of age until he is 18 years old, and as he was born Aug. 14, 1876, he will not be 18 for considerably over a year. When the deposed regents and ministers heard the proclamation they were dumfounded. The king and his advisers acted with great promptitude, and soldiers who were in waiting at once placed the regents and ministers under arrest, and they were sent to rooms which had been prepared for them in the palace, where they are under guard.

The Serbian army is loyal to the king. Had it not been the coup d'etat would not have been possible. After the issuing of the proclamation and long before daybreak the king proceeded to the barracks where the troops were under arms and was received with joyous acclamations and many expressions of loyalty.

The proclamation, which has been issued everywhere in the country, bears the king's signature. In it Alexander declares that the constitution has been lately in sore jeopardy, the rights of the citizens imperiled and the constitutional position of parliament so abused that the king must end the unhappy condition of affairs. He therefore declares that he has come of age and has assumed kingly powers. Hereafter, the proclamation adds, the Serbian constitution acquires its full significance. The regents have been deposed, the cabinet dismissed and a new ministry appointed. M. Dokitch is the new prime minister.

So far the act of Alexander appears to meet with the approval of the populace. The shops are closed in honor of the event, and the streets are thronged with people discussing the situation. Upon the conclusion of the religious services at the cathedral, King Alexander returned to the palace. The people on the streets gave him an ovation and many of them followed him to the palace. Here they cheered until his majesty appeared upon a balcony and thanked the people for their demonstrations of loyalty. He promised to guard the constitution and to secure to the people the full enjoyment of their rights.

One of the young king's first acts should be success in maintaining his present position will probably be to recall his mother, ex-Queen Natalie, from her exile. Between the boy and his mother the strongest affection has always existed, and if he continues to keep the upper hand of the regents political necessities will no longer prevent him from obeying the promptings of his heart toward his mother, who is also beloved by the Serbian people.

Rates for the Fair.

CHICAGO, April 15.—Rates have been adopted by the Western Passenger association for the world's fair for points between the Missouri river and Chicago, based on a general reduction of 20 per cent. from the present rates. The members of the new association are discussing rates west of the Missouri river and it is probable they will make a table, based on that of the eastern rates and so conform to one general plan.

Bills were killed to tax street railway and water companies, enabling the state to obtain higher rates in interest on the state-state money to St. Mary's hospital in Milwaukee. The anti-Pinkerton bill was passed without debate and it now goes to the governor. The measure is especially radical, inasmuch as it forbids employers to use their own employees to defend their own property.

Mr. Ringling offered an amendment to perfect the title which was defeated by a vote of 47 to 42. A joint resolution was adopted giving April 22 as the date for final adjournment. The governor's veto of the bill appropriating $10,000 for a state home for feeble-minded was sustained.

MURFREE'S BURGLAR.

HERE is not a particle of heroism about you, Ulysses," said Mrs. Murfree, as she brushed out her back hair in front of the dresser glass, preparatory to retiring for the night. "Not a particle," she emphatically repeated. "I have known you to be positively cowardly at times."

Mr. Murfree looked up in a weary way from the corner where he sat. "I am sure, my dear," he began.

"No you're not!" snapped his better half. "You are not sure, you are never sure of anything—you only think. I hate a man who 'only thinks,' and she jerked the tangles out of a refractory auburn lock with additional force.

"When Mrs. Jenks was telling to-night about that paragon of a husband of hers I was simply consumed with envy. It shows how much to believe in names. Look at you two men—look, I say!"

"Yes, my dear," responded Mr. Murfree, pulling off his boots in a resigned way. "I'm looking."

"Bait!" retorted his wife. "I mean your names, Ulysses Murfree—Peter Jenks—just think of the difference, and yet Peter Jenks knocked a burglar downstairs this week with one fist, one, I assure you, and you, you are afraid to go calling on the Simsengibbers after dark, because they keep a dog."

"Well, my dear," feebly expostulated Mr. Murfree, "it is a very large dog, and I—"

Here Mrs. Murfree suddenly turned around, and through lips containing sundry hairpins, combs and such trifling articles hissed: "Don't talk to me!" in such an impressive and disgusted manner that Mr. Murfree subsided at once, and proceeded to finish pulling off his socks.

He was not disturbed again until the moment came for retiring when, contrary to their usual custom, Mrs. Murfree turned the gas entirely out, leaving the room in darkness, save where a streak of moonlight fell through the window, open for ventilation.

Now, if there was anything that Mr. Murfree hated, it was to have the bedroom gas turned off at night, but he climbed sadly into bed, and by cogitating a plan whereby he should be able to shoot a burglar in the dark should one chance to visit his abode that night.

Just as the city clock was striking one Mr. Murfree awoke with a start and looked in a dazed way up into the darkness.

"What's the matter with me?" he muttered, a sensation of uneasiness creeping over him. "I think—what's that?" and, broad awake now, with the cold perspiration starting from every pore, he became conscious of a faint rustle in the room, the cause of which the heavy portieres draping the alcove prevented him ascertaining.

Cautiously he reached under the mattress for his revolver, and to his horror, found that after cleaning it on the previous day he had carelessly forgotten to replace it in its wonted spot.

"Oh, Lord! oh, Lord!" he chattered to himself, trying to keep cool; "no revolver, no nothing, and a burglar sure as fate. Samantha was right! I am a coward; what on earth shall I do? If I awake Samantha I will never hear the last of it—she will nag worse than ever; besides, she is sure to yell, and then we will all be murdered!" and the poor man shook so that the springs creaked and sent him into a fresh fit of trembling.

Rustle, rustle, it came again, and then a soft thump and clink.

"He's got my pants," ejaculated Mr. Murfree to himself, as he cautiously sat up in bed and tried to calm himself.

Thump!

"I can't stand this any longer," said Mr. Murfree in a whisper, beginning to get huffy. "I'm a fool. No wonder Samantha said so. I will certainly find out what is outside of those curtains, and this time Samantha shall have a chance to brag over me. Perhaps I shall be able to do something for once."

Keeping well away from the separation between the portieres, he carefully let one foot out of bed.

As it touched the floor the rustle sounded again, and so near that Mr. Murfree nearly lost his balance with fright, and found himself on his feet the next moment, shaking with alarm lest he had provoked the marauder's attention to the alcove or awakened the sleeping Samantha.

But no; all was quiet, and as soon as he plucked up a sufficient amount of courage he peered cautiously through the curtains.

With difficulty he repressed an exclamation of horror.

The moon's rays fell across the dresser, bringing out each article on it with a weird distinctness, and just in the shadow before the cheval glass was the stooping figure of a man.

He was evidently searching the upper drawer, and Mr. Murfree gasped for joy as he distinguished on the top of the cabinet to the right of the glass the missing revolver.

With a mighty effort he braced himself and advanced cautiously, keeping his eyes on the bent figure.

In the uncertain light the man looked unnaturally large and heavy, and seemed each second to be on the point of rising. Indeed, as Mr. Murfree reached the center table he thought it was over and shrank down behind it despairingly.

But fortune was kind, the burglar still searched busily, and Mr. Murfree, gathering himself for a grand effort and nerved to a point of desperation, made a flying leap, and, landing with terrific force upon the burglar's shoulders, grabbed the revolver, yelling: "Police! Thief—Oh!—I!"

Over he went, bumpety bump, and as he found himself prostrate upon the floor with a chair and something soft and thick over him he finished his exclamation with "—it!"

"Oh! Ulysses! Ulysses!" screamed Mrs. Murfree, tugging herself up in the bedclothes in her efforts to rise. "Help! Where are you?"

Mr. Murfree was on his feet in a flash, holding in his arms the harmless cause of his fright and disturbance, Mrs. Murfree's fur cape, which she had hung over the chair-back in front of the dresser, and which, with its high shoulders and collar, had looked in the dim light like a stooping figure.

Men think quickly sometimes, and Mr. Murfree realized the situation with remarkable speed, and, being on his mettle, determined not to be made a fool of.

Knocking Mrs. Murfree's jewel case from the dresser as he fled, he rushed out of the room pell-mell, stepping on the cat, the author of the mysterious noises that had first awakened him.

With a savage kick he sent her ahead of him, as he flew down the front stairs and banged the door open and shut.

Then he panted breathlessly up again, sinking on the top stair, sore, bruised and mad, just as his wife succeeded in lighting the gas.

"Burglar," he gasped.

"Where, oh, where?" she screamed, excitedly, half helping, half dragging him into the room.

"Gone," he managed to say; "knocked him over—got away—front door—see there!" pointing to the jewelry strewn around the floor.

Mrs. Murfree gave one look, and then, with that faithful sense of obligation to the tradition of her sex which the average woman seems to possess in an emergency, she proceeded to faint away.

Mr. Murfree dumped her into a chair. He was too weak to hold her, and besides he felt a fiendish exultation in gloating in his superior strength of mind; so, when she recovered, he was picking up the cleverly scattered trinkets with as bored an air as he could assume.

"What are you scared of?" he said, scornfully. "Man's gone, I'm here; I rather think I have protected you, even if I am a coward. Perhaps you will leave the light burning after this, so that I shall not be obliged to struggle for my life in the dark."

And he wiped from his forehead a few drops of blood trickling from a scratch he received in his encounter with the large pin on his cap—burglar, making his face as gory as possible with the small amount of material.

Mrs. Murfree looked at him a moment in a hysterical way, and then, falling on his neck, alternately implored forgiveness and wept over her former severity, calling him her hero and all the delightful names which Mr. Murfree's soul was thirsting for.

"I'll never say such mean things again," she sobbed, "never never!" "There! there!" said her spouse, straightening up and putting on a patronizing air to conceal the nervous shaking of his muscles—scarce over the recent shock. "You sit down and I will search the house, so that we can feel easy during the remainder of the night."

So while Mrs. Murfree hid behind the bed curtains, for fear of another visitor, her Ulysses went out in the hall and stayed five minutes in a dark corner, returning with a serious air and the assurance that all was well.

Locking their door, the couple once more sought repose, but both were too excited for sleep.

"Won't I just gloat over Mrs. Jenks," exclaimed Mrs. Murfree, as she convulsively patted the pillow into a more accommodating shape. "Oh, Ulysses, I'll tell every woman in the block."

Just then the ludicrous side of the thing struck Mr. Murfree, and he stuffed the corner of the sheet in his mouth and shook convulsively.

"What's the matter, dear?" cried his wife. "What's the matter, Uly?"

"Only a chill—don't bother about it, guess I took cold."

"Shan't I get you something hot?" asked his spouse, anxiously.

"Nonsense," he replied, controlling himself with difficulty, "just go to sleep—I'm tired."

"All right, dear," responded she. "I do hope you won't be sick. It's very funny, Ulysses, that the policeman or one beat didn't hear anything, or come running up to the house when that dreadful man made such a noise at the door. Dear me, if I didn't know you had a chill I should think you were laughing."

WHITE HOUSE RECEPTIONS.

Customary Courtesies on the Arrival of New Officials.

At the president's house on a reception night, or at the house of a cabinet officer on a Wednesday afternoon, or of a senator on a Thursday afternoon, or at any place to which people are asked for their public position there will be found men and women representing every stage of prosperity in the union, and every honest calling that leads to prosperity. And that is precisely what is to be found in the public places of the republic—in the house of representatives, in the senate, in the cabinet, on the supreme bench, and in the White House itself. It is a strange and interesting accumulation of human beings, most of them too timid to be as interesting as they might be. Even when the president issues cards, the people who get together make up a curious conglomeration.

The new congressman takes his wife to the president's, expecting to find the entertainment not very different, although perhaps on a somewhat grander scale, from that to which he is accustomed in the judge's house at the county-seat during court week. So he goes, perhaps in his frock-coat, feeling an American prejudice against evening dress, and a white or flax tie, while his rather fearful helpmate has put on her best black silk, modest or prudish, as you will, with its high neck and its long sleeves. The new congressman experiences no trepidation in addressing the president. They are both politicians, and the new congressman may even believe for a moment that some day he may stand at the head of the line of well-dressed women, whose necks and arms now shine in his startled eyes. He does not doubt that the president is aware of the unique vicissitudes of the recent campaign in his district. There are a hundred subjects that the two have in common, but he is disappointed as he is about to utter his first smart phrase of conversation to feel that the president's hand is gently impelling him forward, and that there is a soft pressure of the crowd behind him in the same direction. It is his first introduction to the reticences and restraints of high life, an introduction which is emphasized and made more impressive by the disinclination of the receiving women to shake hands, or to indicate their recognition of the new member by anything warmer or more emphatic than a courtesy, which, however, is quite enough for the timorous wife at his side, who, much more than her husband, shrinks before the grand dames of the White House and cabinet, some of whom were born to polite society, while some have acquired a large amount of social assurance during their husbands' struggles up the ladder of fame.

Other persons besides congressmen are here, some of them equally uncomfortable, many of them, however, enjoying themselves to the utmost. There is a panorama of all that is prominent in official and political life. There are officers of the army and navy who have been on staff duty at the capital, and are now undergoing, with pleasure or fortitude, as the case may be, the pronounced admiration of young women. There are older officers, who have been more recently on the plains, and who come to the function with wives and daughters and sisters with a delight or reverence due to their honest thinking, to the highest and most resplendent social ceremony in this country—the drawing-room not only of the head of the nation, but of the commander-in-chief of the two military services. The army and navy folk of the staff are usually of that inner circle whose peculiar traits and customs are not now under consideration; but the army people who have spent years on the plains know nothing better, or higher, or wiser, or generally more praiseworthy, than their own people. Therefore they will be found together, although the excited women, who have for years endured with a noble patience the monotony of life at army posts, are rejoiced beyond words if they may only grasp the hand and hear the voice of some paragon of congressional wisdom who has been good to their husbands or to the service.

There will be diplomats in dazzling uniforms; Chinese mandarins in silk attire; Japanese officials, the men in the black evening dress of convention, and the women in the proper costume of Europe and America.

Nearly every one of those who make up this interesting human collection finds somewhere in the moving throng a friend or comrade who will save him from that terrible isolation of an evening party which most persons have felt, and which is often as depressing as the solitude of a great city. There is little need to be alone, and the object of a wondering gaze that freezes the warm blood, in a crush at a Washington reception.—Henry Loomis Nelson, in Harper's Magazine.

THEY CAUGHT ONE MOUSE.

One Trap Which an Expert Did Not Have to Buy.

"Did you ever buy a mouse-trap?" pensively inquired a man on a Sixth avenue elevated train the other morning of the friend who sat next to him. "I never did," said the other, looking up from his newspaper in some surprise, "did you?"

"I have, indeed. I am a mouse-trap expert. You see the mice in our flat have been pretty bad. They grew so tame that I've seen them run across the parlor when three or four people were in the room, and at night the nibbling and pattering became so loud and constant that we could scarcely sleep. We kept a pile of slippers and shoes by the side of the bed, and while the ammunition held out there was a constant fallade. About two weeks ago I grew so sick of 'mouse, mouse,' as the unending domestic topic, that I said to my wife: 'See here, this mouse business must stop. I'll buy a trap.' I did. I came home that evening with one of those round red snap traps, and on the way up from the elevated station I invested in a big slice of fine fresh cheese. Well, we set that trap for four nights, and caught not one mouse. I thought perhaps it worked hard so I oiled up the wires. No success. I then bought a square trap with two holes and another with four, thus giving us a total of eleven mice capacity, but all in vain. The next day I went over in Vesey street and looked into the mouse-trap business.

"Can you give me any points on mouse traps," I said to the proprietor of a store over there. "I know a thing or two about snap traps, but I am looking for a trap that will appeal to an educated, intelligent mouse."

"The dealer looked a little surprised. 'Have you children?' he said. I admitted a little girl."

"Then here," he said, "is the squirrel cage trap. It always pleases the children. The mouse goes in here, the trap closes automatically, and he is caught. He then runs out into this wheel, and by running turns it. It is a very amusing device." I said we were not looking for amusement, but we would like to catch a mouse or two, so I added that trap to the collection, and also another with wire wings, which were open when the trap was set, but clapped together by monkeying with the bait. I now had five traps, and that evening, just before retiring, I smoked up a big piece of cheese, baited every trap, and stood them around the corners of the room in an artless way, which I felt sure would appeal to the class of mice we were catering to. About three o'clock in the morning I awoke feeling very faint. We always keep a cracker or two in our bedroom, and I determined to get up quickly and obtain one. I forgot that wing trap. A moment later my wife was sitting up in a cold perspiration.

"William," she whispered, "is the house afire?"

"Worse than that."

"Heavens and earth," she said, getting ready to scream.

"Keep quiet," I snapped; "my big toe is caught in the new wing trap."

"When she calmed down she kindly told me that my language had revealed depths of depravity in my nature that made her shudder. I finally separated that mouse trap from my person and crept back to bed, smelling like a Welsh rarebit. The next night I made one more attempt with those traps. I concluded the cheese was too mild. So I came home that evening with a slab of German cheese. I never had so much room in an elevated train before. The crowd fell over each other to give me a seat. I could have led that cheese by a string. We went to bed that night with cologne on our pillows and every window open, but all the traps were baited, and I said to my wife, 'It's now or never.'"

The narrator paused here, and positively read the advertisements on the opposite side of the car.

"Well, did you catch a mouse?" demanded his friend, with much interest.

"Yes, we caught a mouse."

"Which trap?"

"No trap at all. He fell into the bathtub." N. Y. Tribune.

RENOVATING FEATHERS.

The Way to Prepare Material for a Soft and Fluffy Pillow.

Almost everyone has pillows or cushions in which are feathers that seriously need attention. One of the best ways to do this, if one is far from a renovating establishment, is to empty the feathers into a wash-boiler of strong soda with half a cup of washing-soda dissolved in it. Let the feathers boil for two or three hours, frequently stirring and beating them with the clothes-stick. The object of this is to free them from any animal matter that may remain and which is the cause of the disagreeable odor so often observed in these articles. When done, throw in sufficient cold water to admit taking out the feathers with the hands; pick them out a few at a time, carefully removing any quills that remain. Many women have time and inclination to do little odd jobs that are an advantage, and to these it may be said that the ordinary feathers, by carefully taking out the larger quills, may be made almost as soft as down. With the thumb and fingers, strip the fines from the quills or cut them with the shears or a sharp knife. The former is much the quicker way, but the latter gives the softer material. Leave only the merest tip of the quill, and the soft fluffy pillows that will be the result are enough to console any woman for the time consumed.

Common chicken-feathers make the most exquisite cushions and pillows if treated in this way; but it is well to wash them thoroughly before using, and to rinse carefully. When ready for drying, put a sheet or large cloth into a tub, pour the feathers, rinsing-water and all into it, then slowly raise the cloth, allowing the water to drain through. When it is all removed, lay the feathers in some dry place, out of the wind, or they will blow away. When nearly dry, beat them with a cane and shake and rub them thoroughly through the hands. In this way all of the fines are loosened and the material becomes as soft and downy as one could imagine. This is some trouble, but it pays, and no disagreeable odor will ever again come into feathers treated in this way, unless they are very carelessly used. A few drops of oil of pine thrown into the rinsing-water will give the feathers a clean, fresh, delightful odor that can be acquired in no other way.—N. Y. Ledger.

BIG GAME RESORTS.

Wild Animals That Roam in the Jungles of Malaya.

Of the three great islands of the Malay peninsula, as a big game resort, Sumatra is said to be the best. Borneo the worst. In Sumatra all the great mammalian varieties are to be found—the tiger, the elephant, the rhinoceros, tapir and orang-outang; in Java, the elephant, tapir and orang-outang are missing, but the rhinoceros and tiger are represented. In Borneo all these large animals are unknown now, though, doubtless, they existed there in former years.

Sumatra offers less inducement to the general order of visitors than the other two mentioned above, for several reasons. The climate is worse, venomous snakes are more numerous, and the greater part of the island, which is still unopened up, is occupied by Batak tribes, who do not encourage strangers.

This part of the world has been extensively colonized by the Dutch, who seem to have made themselves universally hated, owing to the high-handed manner with which they treated the natives. If the stranger can succeed in persuading the Malay that, though white, he is not a Dutchman, he will probably be well received. People who have had an opportunity of judging of their character, pronounce these natives to be peaceable, docile, sober and industrious, and the most truthful of the Asiatic races; and, in addition, skillful workers.

The shikari will find the going bad in such regions as have no roads. For hours, sometimes, he will have to wade waist deep in slimy slush, not infrequently finding himself, like the Irishman in the story, "up to the ankles in mud," but, as he forgot to mention, "head downward." Added to this, he must be prepared to view everything through a perfect maze of mosquitoes. Such is the home of the white rhinoceros, and thither the hunter must venture who wishes to get a shot at him.

This, it may be remarked, is by no means synonymous with bagging his pachydermatous majesty. Indeed, he oftener than not turns the tables on his pursuer, and this considerably takes the gilt off the "shikari" gingerbread. The monster is said to be the only animal that will attack man unprovoked, and considering that, unwildly though he looks, he can go as fast as a horse, the encounter is no joke.

The retreating hunter's best course is to seek safety up a tree; though, unless it is a pretty stout one, this will not better his position much. Even if it is, he may be "treed" there for a considerable time. Unless a European is quite fever proof, and provided with special firearms, this branch of sport is better left untried.

However, should he be sufficiently venturesome to attempt the Sumatra jungles in spite of the above enumerated drawbacks, he will probably find an undisturbed and well-stocked hunting ground, the island being, as the natives say, "fairly creeping with tigers." The czarowitz has survived his trip in these parts, so that there is no reason why others should be deterred, so long as they use ordinary care.

Monkeys abound in endless variety in all these islands, but especially in Borneo. The most remarkable birds were the hornbills, peacocks, pigeons of various kinds, and a very handsome pheasant; also, several water birds, waders and lovely kingfishers. There are said to be no less than two hundred and forty species of land birds known to inhabit this island of Java, while at least forty are peculiar to it.

On the other hand, no less than sixteen genera found in the adjacent islands are absent from this one. Rhinoceros, leopards, wild dogs, and other smaller game, are to be met with, and deer are abundant, but there are no antelope or goats.

To the botanist Java would be full of interest, the beauty and variety of its flora being amazing. The island is very rich in fresh-water fishes, reptiles and insects of all kinds—too rich in the last two named, some people think.—L. Field, in Golden Days.

Funerals and Holidays.

The morning papers announce the death of some ex-statesman and clerks going to their work find the funeral decorators shaking out the folds of the inevitable black goods. Then their first exclamation is: "We shall have a holiday to-day and on the day of the funeral! 'Who's dead?' Black has come to be known as the holiday attire of the government departments. Merchants actually advertise 'holiday sales' for days when dead statesmen are to be buried, and the clerks rush out to hunt bargains or drink beer while the buildings are mourning. Washington is a city of funerals. When they haven't the corpse they have the demonstration and the funeral oratory. The eulogies over dead members and senators in the house and senate have become a dismal farce. Day after day the business is interrupted by the announcement of eulogies to be pronounced over men who died months, perhaps a year, before; and often the man whose praises are to be pronounced in fearful eloquence has never been in congress at all, but has died soon after election and is known to none.—Washington Letter.

—According to the figures collected by a Chicago paper, the number of persons who committed suicide in the United States during the year 1892 was 4,860, as compared with 5,331 in 1891; 2,640 in 1890 and 2,224 in 1889. The total is much larger than that of any of the eleven preceding years. It is somewhat surprising that physicians continue to head the list of prominent persons who have taken their own lives. The causes of suicide—always an interesting study—were as follows: Despondency, 1,463; unknown, 684; insanity, 520; domestic infelicity, 290; liquor, 315; disappointed love, 249; ill health, 278; business losses, 55. Of this number 3,035 were males and 805 females. Shooting was the most favored method of self-destruction employed.—Chicago Graphic.

The New Bread.

The favor with which the new bread, made with Royal Baking Powder instead of yeast, has been received by our best housekeepers and most expert breadmakers, is really wonderful. "It saves all the hard and tedious work of kneading and moulding," writes one. "Less than an hour from the dry flour to the most perfect loaf of bread I ever saw," writes another. "Fresh bread every day," says another, "and that the lightest, finest and most wholesome, is something to live for." "We relish the bread better than the old kind," "it is ahead of any yeast bread I ever baked;" "the bread was whiter and softer;" "Best of all," writes an enthusiastic housewife; "we can eat the Royal unfermented bread when freshly baked, or even when warm, with perfect impunity. It is actually an anti-dyspeptic."

"This bread has a 'nutty' taste, that is peculiarly pleasing," writes still another. This is owing to the fact that the active gas-producing principle of the Royal is derived from the pure grape acid.

The great value of this bread arises from the fact that in it are preserved all the most nutritive elements of the flour, some of which are decomposed and destroyed by the action of yeast. The loss of these properties is what makes fresh yeast bread unwholesome. The use of the Royal Baking Powder instead of yeast is found to make a finer, lighter bread, devoid of all dyspeptic qualities. The same gas—carbonic—is produced as where yeast is used, but it is evolved from the baking powder itself and not from the flour. Thereby the bread is made more wholesome and actually anti-dyspeptic. The greater convenience where a batch of the finest bread can be made and baked in less than an hour with no danger of a sour or heavy loaf, must be appreciated by everyone.

The receipt for making this bread is herewith given, and housekeepers will do well to cut it out and preserve it.

To make one loaf: One quart flour, 1 teaspoonful salt, half a teaspoonful sugar, 2 heaping teaspoonfuls Royal Baking Powder, half medium-sized cold boiled potato, and water. Sift together thoroughly flour, salt, sugar, and baking powder; rub in the potato; add sufficient water to mix smoothly and rapidly into a stiff batter, about as soft as for pound cake; about a pint of water to a quart of flour will be required—more or less according to the brand and quality of the flour used. Do not make a stiff dough, like yeast bread. Pour the batter into a greased pan, 4x8 inches, and 4 inches deep, filling about half full. The loaf will rise to fill the pan when baked. Bake in very hot oven 45 minutes, placing paper over first 15 minutes baking, to prevent crust too soon on top. Bake at once. Don't mix with milk.

Perfect success requires the most careful observance of all these details.

The author of the receipt emphasizes the statement that Royal Baking Powder only can be used because it is the only powder in which the ingredients are prepared so as to give that continuous action necessary to raise the larger bread loaf.

To every reader who will write the result of her bread making from this receipt to the Royal Baking Powder Co., 106 Wall street, New York, that company announce that they will send in return, free, a copy of a most practical and useful cook book, containing one thousand receipts for all kinds of baking, cooking, etc. Mention this paper.

AN ANGRY INSPECTOR.

Mrs. Helen Hunt's Experience in a Museum in Copenhagen.

One of the sights of Copenhagen is the Rosenberg castle collection, officially known as the "Chronological Collection of the Kings of Denmark." When Mrs. Helen Hunt went to see it she bought a "full ticket," so as to insure the entire attention of the museum inspector. He was a handsome man, fifty years old or more, and when he began to speak English the visitor's delight was unbounded. What an afternoon she should have! "I am sorry," she said, "that we have so short a time in which to see these beautiful and interesting collections. Two hours is nothing!" "Oh, I shall explain to you everything," he said, and he proceeded to throw open the doors of mysterious wall closets. Says Mrs. Hunt: "The first thing he pointed out to me was the famous Oldenborg horn, said to have been given to Count Otto of Oldenborg by a mountain nymph in a forest one day in the year 909. As he pointed to it I opened my catalogue to find the place where it was mentioned, that I might make on the margin some notes of points that I wished to recollect. I might have been looking at it for perhaps half a minute when thundering from the mouth of my splendid Dane came:

"Do you prefer that you read it in the catalogue than that I tell you?" I am not sure, but my impression is I actually jumped at his tone. I know I was frightened. I explained to him that I was not looking for it in the catalogue to read then and there, but only to associate what I saw with its place and with the illustrations in the catalogue, and to make notes for future use. He hardly heard a word I said. Putting out his hand and waving my poor catalogue away, he said:

"It is all there. You shall find everything there as I tell you. Will you listen?" Quite cowed, I tried to listen, but I found that without my marginal notes I should remember nothing. I opened my catalogue again. The very sight of it seemed to act upon him like a scarlet flag on a bull.

Instantly he burst out upon me again. In vain I tried to stem the tide of his angry words, and the angrier he got the less intelligible became his English. "Perhaps you take me for a servant in this museum," he said. "Perhaps my name is as good in my country as yours is in your own."

"Oh, do—do listen to me one minute!" I said. "If you will only hear me I think I can make you understand. I do implore you not to be angry."

"I am not angry. I have listened to you every time—the many times. I have not time to listen any more."

This he said so angrily that I felt the tears coming into my eyes. I was in despair. I turned to Harriet and said, "Very well, Harriet, we will go."

"You shall not go!" he exclaimed. "Twenty years I have shown this museum and never yet was any one before dissatisfied with what I tell them. I have myself written this catalogue you carry. Now I will nothing say, and you can ask if you wish I should explain anything."

He folded his arms and stepped back, the very image of a splendid man in a silk. I hesitated what to do, but at last I gulped down my wounded feelings and went on looking and making notes.

Presently he began to cool down, to see his mistake. In less than half an hour he had ceased to be hostile, and before the end of the hour he had become friendly, and more. He seized both my hands in his, exclaiming:

"We shall be good friends—good! You must come again to Rosenberg; you must see it all. I will myself show you every room. No matter who sends to come in, they shall not be admitted. I go alone with you."

Deceitful Appearances.

I was chatting with a Montague street real estate man in his office a few days ago, when a woman entered who attracted the attention of both of us. She was middle-aged, very plain in face and figure and wore a black dress which was patched and ripped in many places. Her entire appearance denoted poverty and misery and indicated that she had a great struggle to keep the wolf from entering at her door. Instinctively feeling that the woman was a beggar, when she asked to offer her some money, when she astonished us a little by saying she had some private business with the real estate man.

They went into his inner office and were engaged for about fifteen minutes in earnest conversation. After she had gone and my friend had ceased to gaze in open mouthed amazement at her vanishing figure, he enlightened me as to her object in the following manner: "Well, I'll be darned! That woman wanted to buy a $10,000 piece of property I have for sale, and she had $2,000 in her pocket to pay down to bind the bargain. O Lord, think if I had offered her ten cents and told her to clear out!"—Brooklyn Eagle.

Contraction of the iron used in constructing the great Eiffel tower makes that famous structure eight inches shorter in winter than it is during the hot summer months.

Detecting Disease by the Eye.

It is perfectly possible, by means of the instruments of the Nineteenth century, to exactly learn the optical condition of an eye, to decide just what glasses, if any, are needed for its perfect working, and it is also possible to look in upon it, and by the appearance of its tissues and its blood vessels to decide as to the existence of serious disease when there are few other symptoms that point to it, when there may be none besides to be found in the body that positively prove it.

I may mention two classes of disease, one constitutional and the other local, which illustrate this statement. The eye mirror ophthalmoscope is the instrument by which such things are settled. Bright's disease, a name carrying dread to many a household, is the constitutional disease to which I refer. In not a few cases the diagnosis of it is made by the examination of the retina with the eye mirror.

The expert will make no mistake if the eye gives evidence of it, for its signs are positive in minute bleeding from the blood vessels and peculiar fawn-colored spots on the retina. The surgeon dreads to find them, because they are evidence of an advanced stage of the malady which prematurely destroys so many lives. Bright's disease is in fact a degeneration of many of the tissues of the body, the walls of the arteries being among them. In no part of the body can this degeneration be so readily detected as in the retina of the eye.—Cosmopolitan.

Pure Narcotic Death.

Under chloroform, as under all anesthetic gases and vapors, there is a mode of death which may be called the final or natural. It need never be produced, and never could be except under the most unskillful management, and it is a long time in its progress. When death does occur in this manner it is by the slow extinction of the natural animal zymosis, and is illustrated, as to method, perfectly by the simple experiment of gradually extinguishing a candle in a confined space by introducing vapor of chloroform into the air that fills the space.

It can be illustrated also by the experiment of stopping ordinary fermentation by the presence of chloroform, and even by the simpler process of using chloroform vapor as a preservative of animal tissues from decomposition. All anesthetics are open to kill in this manner, but that is the safest anesthetic which puts out life in no other manner, which does not, that is to say, cause either of the reflexes of spasmodic character during administration.—Aseptic

When Jay Gould Was a Boy.

"At one time," said Mr. Woolhiser, who as a boy worked in the same store with Jay Gould, "while Gould was in the employ of Burnham he fell sick. My father, who was a general nurse and something of a doctor, attended him and brought him around all right. Not long after he recovered he met my father and said, 'You saved my life, and if at any time you are in need and I can help you I shall do so with pleasure. Fortune has not smiled on my poor old father of late, and being in absolute need he wrote to Mr. Gould, telling him of his condition and asking for help. No reply was ever received. I think that our letters never reached Mr. Gould, or he would surely have helped us. I wrote to him only a few days before his death for the fourth or fifth time. Gould was always a good boy, and for awhile we slept together in the same bed in the old store in Roxbury. Jay never missed saying his nightly prayers before retiring.'"—New York World.

The Study of Philately.

Philately is a study. It is a pursuit that adds more to the life of the young collector than any other of his pleasures. Philately in the present generation is assuming vast proportions as an instructive science and is even now a formidable rival of numismatics. No longer is it called a mania or a craze, but a science teaching the geography, history, language and the morals of a country. Our philatelists are not mere schoolboys and girls, although they collect stamps, but men of mature minds; men well established in business and professions, men of sound judgment, intellectual and thoughtful men. And it is this fact that gives the young collector encouragement, the knowledge that each man do exist in the ranks of philatelists.—Ohio State Journal.

Raising Canary Birds.

In Germany the poorer classes are nearly all engaged in raising canaries. Several hundred thousand are shipped every year to all parts of the world. There is no industry like it in existence. The birds are strong and hardy and require very little attention; consequently among the peasantry every family has a aviary, which is a constant source of income, independent of the proceeds of their daily toil. The buyers for the New York houses make periodical trips through the country; the birds are bought and are soon on their way to America, where they quickly become accustomed to their gilded cages.—Pittsburg Record.

The Limit of Population.

Philosophers and statisticians have compared figures and find that the limit of the earth's capacity is 5,294,000,000 human beings; also that this number will be reached before the close of the Twenty-first century.—St. Louis Republic.

Circuit court is still at work on the criminal calendar James McLeod was acquitted of the charge of killing Frank Pohore, an excellent jury of business men thinking he was perfectly justified. The Subject Of Cranks was discussed by Rev. D. B. Cheney of West Superior at the Baptist Church Tuesday evening. There was an excellent audience out to hear the gifted young man from the city of books and promise, and they were well entertained. Mr. Cheney is a good talker and a good thinker, but hardly treated the crank with due consideration. The crank is a necessity to this day and age. He is the one who brings about reform in any great or small thing, and the world owes more to the man who is deeply interested in one subject than to the one who is but little interested in all.

An Acknowledgment.

The old adage that a friend in need is a friend indeed, was strikingly illustrated during the legislative session at Madison last winter. With a gang of rapacious down river lumber men seeking to cut the heart out of Rhinelander, the men who would come to the aid of the under dog from purely reasons of fairness, was the friend in need. Such a man was Benjamin Sweet, and it is only just to say that his work and help did more to defeat the work of the powerful crowd which was after us, than that of any other one man. Ben seems to be acquainted everywhere throughout Northern Wisconsin as he is in Rhinelander and the good feature of it is that his acquaintances all seem to have the same high regard for him that the people here have. The citizens of Rhinelander owe a debt of gratitude to Ben Sweet, and they will repay it as opportunities present themselves.

Groceries Cheap—But for Cash.

M. Langdon is now selling groceries at a closer margin than any merchant in town. There are some good reasons why he can do this. One is that he sells for cash only and thereby makes none of his customers who pay their bills also pay for those who don't. Another reason is that he buys as cheaply as anyone and by selling for cash can afford to make a smaller margin.

DEAR MR. CONGREVE:—As a rule I have no faith in advertised remedies; but I must now be some twenty-five years since that I saw in the person of one of my students the effects of your remedy. He seemed at death's door, but he lives now, a strong, healthy man. Since then I have seen in many very many instances, the most happy results following your medicine.
I do not go by hearsay, but I testify to what I have seen with my own eyes. I believe that you have saved many thousands of lives. I have friends with coughs and weak lungs, who speak of your medicine with sincere gratitude. Personally, I find it most useful in the case of whooping cough. Very reluctantly do I give testimonials for publication; but I send you this as your due. What I have seen of God's healing power through you, distinguishes me that I speak for the good of others. I have those around me whose health I value, and they are living witnesses that yours is a very beneficial preparation.

ESCAPED FROM PRISON.

Some of the Most Extraordinary

Cases on Record.

There are several criminals in the United States of whom it has been said that no jail is strong enough to hold them. Like all sweeping assertions, this statement is probably an exaggeration; but still it must be admitted that the recorded cases of successful jail-breaking have been so numerous and so skillfully planned and executed as to astound the usually self-confident prison officials, some of whom on rare occasions seem prepared to admit that they have not secured a monopoly of the intelligence and shrewdness of the world.

Martin Foy, confined in the county jail in Ballston, N. Y., walked out one day and was not captured for a long time. He probably never would have been taken had he not yielded to his passion for attending horse races. At some track in California he was recognized by a man who notified the police.

Foy was taken back to Ballston on whittled into the shape of a pistol covered with the tinfoil from his chewing tobacco.

ous bank robber, from Ludlow street where he was held to await execution, papers from Massachusetts the Northampton bank affair, when

$3,000 was taken, was sensational for some time inexplicable. Information, however, showed that he had the assistance of expected accomplices on the outside. At on the eventful day, May 7, 1874, as visited by his wife, who acted as "go-between." Leary's friends hired a room in the house next to the jail, and had picked their through to a closet at the end of third tier of cells, the bricks and bar being taken out carefully and laid in the fireplace of their apartment. Leary notified her husband that was ready, and he crawled through hole to liberty. Leary was already the run of the corridor until past ten o'clock, which was his time for retiring, so that it was some time before his escape was discovered. He accordingly had no trouble in eluding his pursuers.

amors, pulling his hat down over his eyes, selected a moment when none of guards was looking and snatched of the building with as much nonchalance as though he were the warden himself. Once in the street, his wond nerve did not desert him, for, pite the fact that his absence might be discovered at any moment, when result would of course, result, he did quicken his pace until he had arived at the lodgings which had been secured for him. Connors escaped in 1871 and was not recaptured until 1871.

William J. Sharkey is supposed to be older in the Spanish army at the same time. He escaped from the prison November 12, 1873, while under investigation for the brutal murder of bert S. Dunn. While awaiting sentence of death a stay of proceedings was granted. Sharkey now occupies a place and decidedly unenviable position, for he is the only man in the prison who could be legally hanged in state of New York, as his conviction occurred years before the election law had ever been suggested.

Sharkey was assisted in his escape

by his sweetheart, Maggie Jordan, extremely pretty girl whose devotion he repaid with blows and kicks

she had, at imminent peril to herself, snatched him from the very shadow of the gallows. Maggie seemed to be

SQUELCHING AN INTRUDER.

Brother Dawson Asserts His Rights in an Emphatic Manner.

One of the colored women employed about the hotel was sweeping off the veranda when an old man with a crooked leg and carrying a broomstick for a cane halted at the steps and saluted:

"Good maw'nin', Brudder Dawson—

how yo' do dis maw'nin'?"

"What yo' mean talkin' dat 'ere to leaned on the broom to look him over.

"Good maw'nin', Brudder Dawson!"

GENUINE HOSPITALITY.

Hints to Young Housekeepers About the Art of Entertaining.

A great deal has been written about the need of young housekeepers hardening their means, and the folly of entertaining too many guests. It is perfectly true that a great number of visitors may be a serious drain on the resources of a family of limited means. It is also equally true that those who do not entertain their friends become narrow and selfish in their ideas, and that there is nothing that tends to broaden the heart and mind so much as genuine disinterested friendship.

The husband who is jealous of the attentions which his wife pays to her girl companions is a despicable and narrow-minded man. The woman who grudges her husband the companiship of his friends, and who fails to Vegetable Sea Constructors.

Portions of the South Pacific ocean produce a wonderful species of the seaweed called the "vegetable sea constructor." They are likely to be met with at any point between the lower point of southern California and the Sandwich Islands in the one direction and between Chile and Australia on the other. These vine-like stranglers are frequently found tightly entwined about the body of a dead whale, shark or porpoise, but whether they had fastened upon the bodies of these dead sea animals before life had become extinct or had only ventured to attack the remains after the vital spark had fled are conundrums which of course cannot be answered. Experiments made with this curious vine and the carcass of a porpoise washed ashore in the harbor at Apia tend to prove that the vine, like that of our common bean, will not entwine itself around anything dead, whether that thing be of vegetable or animal creation.

Dr. Chadbourne, in his "Annals of the Caroline Islands," says: "I have often seen monster specimens of macrelycysts (the giant seaweed) with every vestige of life squeezed out of them, by that ocean demon, the constrictor vine, which is itself a species of seaweed. Macrelycysts often grows to be from 20 to 30 inches in diameter and 1,500 to 2,000 feet in length, while the constrictor vine seldom exceeds 100 feet in length and is never larger in diameter than a pound and a half salmon can. It is the 'squeeze snake' of the ocean, however, and woe to the unlucky man, animal or plant that comes within its reach."—St Louis Republican.

She Enjoyed the Eclipse. That the ignorance of New York high school girls is duly noted, in a measure at least, across the bridge, was indicated in a Brooklyn street car on the day of the solar eclipse. As the car passed the building that afternoon a bevy of these students entered. They chattered of the event, one explaining that her opportunities had been especially good, as a teacher had let her have a smoked glass at the most interesting moment and had told her all about it while she looked, "and, oh, girls," she finished, "which was it anyway, an eclipse of the sun or the moon?"—New York Times.

A Lucky Lord Lieutenant. It is rumored in Dublin that Lord Houghton, the new viceroy of Ireland, will very soon enter again the pleasant bonds of wedlock. The lord lieutenant is addressed as "sir," just like the Prince of Wales, and he has the privilege of kissing the young ladies presented at the drawing rooms. Some of the past lord lieutenants have kissed as many as 350 young ladies in the course of a single afternoon.—London Star.
